Islamic Center Developers May Continue, Judge Says

A Manhattan judge yesterday gave developers the green light to continue work on a controversial Islamic center and mosque near Ground Zero. Timothy Brown, a retired firefighter who was a 9/11 first responder, sued the New York City Landmarks Preservation Commission, claiming it acted arbitrarily when it failed to grant landmark status to one of the existing structures at the site where Saudi El-Gamal plans to build the center.

In a decision filed yesterday, Supreme Court Justice Paul G. Feinman blocked Mr. El-Gamal from demolishing the buildings until the case is heard on its merits. In a ruling from the bench yesterday, Supreme Court Justice Paul G. Feinman denied Mr. Brown's motion for a temporary restraining order.

Meanwhile yesterday, the American Center for Law and Justice, which filed the suit on Mr. Brown's behalf, claimed in a news release that the judge denied the motion following an "admission" by Adam Leitman Bailey, who represents Mr. El-Gamal, his company, Soho Properties, and the site's owner, 45 Park Place Partners LLC, that they were "far along" in their negotiations to settle the dispute.

Mr. El-Gamal has moved to dismiss Mr. Brown's suit, saying he suffered no actual injury and failed to name 45 Park Place in the action. Mr. Bailey said in an interview that the judge "made it known" yesterday that Mr. Brown "might not have standing" and that money issues were not brought up at the hearing. The motion to dismiss will be argued on Feb. 22.—Noreen G. Walder

Adam Leitman Bailey, P.C. was victorious in representing an Islamic community center who wanted to build a Mosque near Ground Zero.

The motion papers included, among others, defenses based on the fundamental rights guaranteed to all Americans by the United States Constitution including that, under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution, people are entitled to the free exercise of their religion. Adam Leitman Bailey, PC argued that intrinsic in that right, is the right to construct a house of worship and that our clients' decision to build an Islamic Community Center in Lower Manhattan was consistent with the free exercise of their religion.
